All scholarship programmes require a certain level of attendance and academic performance. If students do not attend classes or do not meet the required standards, they will not be eligible to receive a scholarship for that month. For this reason, scholarships are usually awarded once the monthly requirements have been met. If the university agrees to deduct tuition fees directly or to pay scholarships earlier, it will always be on the condition that if the student does not meet all the study requirements and will not be eligible to collect the scholarship in a given month, he/she will be obliged to pay the full tuition fees himself/herself.
